

Table 3.A
Components of year-related expressions in the Book of Mormon

Components

This Table separates the components of each year-related expression into one, two or three textual facts. These facts include a single essential component (a year-term) and may include one or both of two optional components (a time-term and/or a number-term). The diction, spelling and punctuation of each component are based on the Yale text. All 426 year-terms of the Book of Mormon are listed in the same sequence and with the same text numbers and Yale text references as in Table 1.A.

A year-term is the fundamental component of a year-related expression. A year-term may be either express or implied, but if it is implied, it closely follows an express year-term in a separate expression and the nearby text indicates that an implied year-term is intended. Each implied year-term is marked with a tilde “~”, except in the unique instance (Helaman 1:13) when it is represented by the pronoun it.

A time-term usually describes one of the three Nephite chronological systems, but it may also describe an individual’s age or regnal period, or another time personalized to an individual or group. An expression with no express time-term is marked with a dash “—”.

A number-term modifies a year term with definite or general language that states or implies the year-term’s quantity or quantitative position. A year-related expression with no express number-term also is marked with a dash “—”.
